Volunteers Searching For 800 Bodies Near Venezuelan Oil Town

Shanty Town Had 2,500 Population

Scores of Doctors, Nurses Are Rushed to Scene of Disaster; Refugees Are Taken Away

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov. 15 (AP).—Volunteer workers searched Lake Maracaibo today for the bodies of 500 to 800 persons estimated to have died in a fire which swept the oil town of Lagunillas, a village of wooden shacks perched on stilts at the water's edge.

While the searchers paddled through floating debris and charred piling—all that remained of the shanty town which housed 2,500 natives employed in the great oil fields nearby—the government mobilized its resources to aid the survivors.

Airplanes brought scores of doctors and nurses, while additional first aid parties and supplies were rushed by boat from the other side of the lake—60 miles away. National Guard detachments took over the task of maintaining order. President Eleazar Lopez Contreras decreed three days of mourning throughout the nation and quickly raised a relief fund of 355,000 bolivars, $110,050, which was swelled by subscriptions taken up in many Venezuelan towns and cities.

Several years ago the Venezuelan government, with the assistance of the foreign oil companies, built a new village called Ciudad Ojeda to replace the flimsy, oil-soaked Lagunillas. However, in spite of the fact the natives were supplied at the new town with free water, gas and light service, they did not like it and failed to move in great numbers.

Transportation Is Supplied
Today the oil companies supplied transportation to move the refugees from the burnt town to Ciudad Ojeda. Temporary quarters also were established hastily in the nearby town of Bachaquero.

Recovery of the bodies of the victims, many of whom were children, was hindered by the debris in the water. Approximately 100 bodies had been recovered last night, and authorities could only guess at the number still beneath wreckage.

Hundreds of weeping survivors who lost relatives lined the shores as the search progressed.

The cause of the fire, under investigation by a special commission of three cabinet ministers, remained uncertain, but was generally attributed to the explosion of a kerosene lamp in one of the shacks.

So swiftly did the flames sweep through the stilt village that hundreds were trapped in their homes. The surface of the lake, continually covered with a film of oil, was transformed into a fiery cauldron which cut off all chances of escape. Flames balked outside aid.

Engulfed by Flames
Witnesses said one launch which attempted to approach the burning village was engulfed by the flames and sank with all aboard.

An off-shore wind, which swept the fire out into the lake, speeded destruction of the houses, about 200 of which were grouped in an area equivalent to one or two city blocks. A bridge, connecting the houses with the shore was quickly destroyed.

Oil Company properties in the vicinity of Lagunillas, which is located about 30 miles from the seaport of Maracaibo in the heart of Venezuela's rich petroleum country, were reported undamaged.

Three major producers—Royal Dutch Shell, Standard of New Jersey and Gulf Oil Corporation—have terminals in the Lake Maracaibo region. Much of Venezuela's annual production of about 188,000,000 barrels is handled through Lagunillas and the neighboring towns of La Roza, Cabimas and La Salina.

At Lagunillas, oil piped from inland and from wells drilled in the bed of the lake is loaded on small tankers for conveyance across the shallow bar at Maracaibo to ocean-going tankers in the harbor.

Similar Fire
Abilene, Tex., Nov. 15 (AP).—The disastrous blaze which swept Lagunillas, Venezuela, reminded Jerome L. Gunn of a fire which razed the same village 10 years ago this month.

The 1929 death toll, never definitely fixed, was between 18 and 33. American oil field workers slipped live steam from their boilers to help peons to combat the fire.

Murry Guggenheim Dies in New York; Ill Several Days

New York, Nov. 15 (AP).—Murry Guggenheim, capitalist member of the famous copper mining family, died today.

Guggenheim, long identified with philanthropic work in New York, died at his Fifth avenue home after an illness of several days. He was 81.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Leonie Bernheim Guggenheim, a son and a daughter.

In the neighborhood of Wall street, the name of Murry Guggenheim for decades suggested copper, silver and Chilean nitrate, the stock in trade of the famous family firm of which he was a member.

Further up town, the name meant band concerts on the mall in Central Park on hot summer nights.

All over the city, it suggested the dentist's office to hundreds of thousands of school children who could not afford the services of a private practitioner.

The millions of dollars with which Murry Guggenheim and his wife endowed their dental clinic and other charities and helped support the Goldman band concerts, came from one of America's great family fortunes, founded by Meyer Guggenheim, a

Officials Check Incendiary Angle Of Fire at House

Wood, Murphy of Opinion Blaze at Haberstumpf's Dwelling Was Deliberate; Haystack Burns

Evidence Found

Kerosene-Soaked Waste Paper and Excelsior Are Located at Scene

Police and fire officials were busy today investigating the fire, of supposed incendiary origin, that damaged the vacant residence of Adolph Haberstumpf at 364 South Wall street, shortly after 8 o'clock Tuesday evening.

The house, which has been unoccupied for several months, while the Haberstumpfs were on Long Island, is a story and a half frame structure. The fire was discovered by neighbors who called the fire department.

Both the police chief and the fire chief expressed the opinion today that the fire had been set. Evidence of arson was discovered by the firemen in lighting the fire.

The fire apparently started in the bedroom and hallway on the second floor where waste material which had been soaked in kerosene oil was found by the firemen, according to the fire chief.

Word of the fire was telegraphed today to Mr. Haberstumpf who, with his wife, have been on Long Island for several weeks.

Attending Banquet
At the time the fire was first discovered Chief of Police J. Allan Wood and Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy were at the Hotel Eichler attending the annual banquet of the Central Business Men's Association. They were notified at once that the fire was of suspicious origin, and left immediately for the scene where they took charge of the investigation that followed the extinguishment of the flames.

The fire in the Haberstumpf house broke out about two hours after the fire department had been called for a fire in a 10-ton stack of hay on Condie street, a few blocks away. The hay was owned by William Richter.

The haystack fire had been extinguished by the firemen and they were preparing to return to the fire stations when the alarm was turned in from Box 4222 at Washington and Greenkill avenues. The hay fire caused a still alarm to be sent in to the Central fire station at 6:15 o'clock. The alarm for the Haberstumpf fire was rung in at 8:26 o'clock.

Two Calls Received
The fire department received two calls for the South Wall street fire, one by telephone and the other from the bell alarm that another neighbor turned in.

According to the authorities there was found plenty of evidence that the fire had been set. Excelsior and waste paper soaked in kerosene oil were found on the second floor, and the drawers in the bedroom furniture had been pulled open and left open.

The firemen found a can and a pail, still partially filled with kerosene, on the premises.

On arriving at the house the firemen found all of the doors locked.

Brother, DuBois Riley, Brings Up First Body About 7:30 A. M. at Catskill

Rumor Is Baseless

Report Is Unconfirmed That Loudenslager's Body Found

Grappling irons handled by DuBois Riley of Catskill early this morning brought from the bottom of the Hudson river the body of his brother, William S. Riley, of Catskill, who was one of five hunters all of whom are believed drowned when their small outboard motor boat capsized near the upriver village Saturday night.

The body of Riley, who married Katherine Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Anderson of this city, was recovered at 7:30 o'clock this morning shortly after grappling efforts were resumed for the day following unsuccessful attempts yesterday and Monday.

An unofficial report late this afternoon to the effect that the body of Earl C. Loudenslager, of this city, had been found remained unverified at the time The Freeman went to press.

DuBois Riley, who joined in the search for the bodies of the hunters, was on one of the cruisers of the conservation department with a group headed by Game Protector James Overbagh of the Catskill area, when the body of his brother was found an estimated mile south of the point where the hunters had their camp.

At 40-Foot Depth
The body was found in 40 feet of water in mid-channel. It was still clothed in a heavy hunting coat in two pockets of which were boxes of shells. Officials on the boat carrying the brother of the ill-fated hunter, when the discovery was made reported that the hunter somehow had managed to get his heavy laced shoes loosened in a struggle to save his own life. A cartridge belt, however, fully loaded, had not been removed.

It is believed by the officials that the other hunters in the party also experienced the same fate of Riley due to the heavy clothing they wore on their trip from shore toward the camp which was supplied for a week-end duck-hunting trip. It is unlikely, the officials believe that any of the five had time to remove the heavier parts of clothing which all of them wore.

Efforts Concentrated
Grappling efforts were concentrated throughout the day in the vicinity of the spot where Riley's body was found, but up until late this afternoon the officials reported no other bodies recovered.

No coat or other parts of clothing were found since the searching began at the outset of the week, and this too, the officials believe, indicates that none of the men had time during their struggle in the water, to remove the heavier pieces of clothing. Only four hats, and a blanket used by one of the men in the party, were found since the grappling began.

Coroner Mahlon H. Atkinson advanced the theory Monday that the small boat in which the five were riding at the time of the accident, was probably upset by the "swells" of a tugboat or other craft which passed that point in the river early Saturday night.

Throttle 'Wide Open'
The outboard motor in which the men had been sailing at the time was found Sunday near the Rip Van Winkle bridge, capsized and with its throttle "wide open." The manner in which the boat was found, the officials theorize, also indicates that the accident which threw the hunters into the water was sudden and gave them little time to prevent the death of all of them by drowning.

The other men on the tragic hunting party were Earl Loudenslager, dental supply salesman of this city, Dr. John F. Redmond, Catskill dentist, James Roe of Catskill and Dr. William Harrison Herron, dentist of Stamford.

The tragedy which came to light late Sunday incited one of the most extensive searching efforts on the Hudson river in some time. At least 50 men including of

FDR Won't Fight For Delegates in Spring Primaries

High Party Officials Say Action Would Not Give Any Indication on Issue of Term

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP).—Persons high in Democratic party councils predicted today that President Roosevelt would make no fight for Democratic convention delegates in preferential primaries next spring.

They expressed the opinion that, even if Mr. Roosevelt intended to run for a third term, he would not authorize use of his name on the primary ballots in states requiring candidates' consent.

Instead, they predicted, he would rely on uninstructed delegates and on his chances of picking up delegations from states pledged to other candidates after they had recorded their primary-directed preferences in initial voting at the convention.

Mr. Roosevelt once more declined to shed any light yesterday on his third term intentions. At the White House press conference, a reporter mentioned the week-end announcement that Vice President Garner's name would go before the Democratic convention.

Don't Be Subtle
"Does that change your plans in any way, Mr. President?" he asked.

The President smiled and told his questioner not to be so subtle. Senator Van Nuys (D.-Ind.) told reporters today that he thought Mr. Roosevelt should state immediately whether he intended to run again.

"The next election is going to be crucial," Van Nuys said, "and the party and public are entitled to this information so that they can weigh the several candidates and pick the best man in the event President Roosevelt declares he will not run."

"We need a man of poise and experience and not a candidate selected by trades and swaps in a hectic national convention."

It was learned on good authority that a fellow Indianan of Van Nuys—Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator—would try to win Democratic convention delegates in many of the 12 states which use the primary system.

The only states omitted, it was said reliably, would be ones where a bitter contest with a favorite son might result or where other unfavorable circumstances prevailed.

Friends of McNutt reiterated that his candidacy was contingent on Mr. Roosevelt's intentions and that the security administrator would leave the race if the President entered it.

In contrast, E. B. Germany, campaign manager for Vice President Garner, has declared that the latter is in the presidential race to win.

Draftsman Is Held For Trunk Murder

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 15 (AP).—A slight, quiet-spoken young draftsman was charged with first-degree murder today less than 14 hours after the body of his salesman-roommate was found stuffed in a trunk in a rooming house attic.

The accused man was Lionel D. Grant, 29, the victim Ernest Uhlig, 31-year-old salesman from Oneonta, N. Y.

Special Prosecutor Clarence Unclless charged that Grant had killed Uhlig "by choking, asphyxiation and strangulation," and quoted the defendant as saying he taped Uhlig's mouth and nose and tied neckties around his throat early Saturday morning in the climax of a drinking party.

Residential Area Proposed to BPW

Davis Asks Work Be Done to Open Building Area

A proposed restricted residential area in Kingston to be known as the Burgevin Residential Park, was brought to the attention of the board of public works Tuesday afternoon by Burton Davis, who appeared before the board with a request that some work be done on proposed roads as a grading project.

Mr. Davis said that he did not ask to have the streets laid out but only to have a grading machine run through them so that these who visited the proposed site would have an opportunity of driving through.

The matter was referred to Superintendent Ernest Steuding.

Presents Drawing
Mr. Davis presented a drawing of the proposed plan which calls for an extension of Pearl street in the rear of the Burgevin, hot houses in a westerly direction. It would open up, he said, some 100 building lots, and each lot would be 100 by 150 feet.

The drawing also showed the site of a proposed park in the center of the development. This park which will be located on the highest elevation in the development will be for the use of those residing in this residential district.

The board informed Mr. Davis that they were willing to do all that they could legally to increase building operations in Kingston, and the erection of more homes.

Pipe Will Not Break

It was reported that the cost of piping the brook, running through Wilbur avenue, between Henry street and Greenkill avenue, would cost $20,118, constructed as a WPA project. Of this amount the city and property owners whose lands abut on the brook would pay $1,000, the remaining $19,000 being paid by the WPA.

The board adopted a resolution directing that the work of building the concrete culvert be started

Operator of Diners Leases Site of Old Bottling Works

Utility Firm Has $107,000 Fee Cut Plan for Next Year

Electric rate changes involving $107,000 annual reduction in the total charges for service supplied by the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation will be made effective January 1, 1940, if approved by the public service commission, it was announced today.

In discussing this rate revision, A. L. Colligan, district manager, said that it was made in accordance with the Central Hudson Company's program for progressively reducing and improving its rates as the use of electric service increases and savings can be made through improvement in equipment and methods of operation. Mr. Colligan said that the aggregate amount of rate reduction made since 1924 under this program will now be increased to $2,000,000, of which more than half has been made since 1933.

In connection with the present rate revision, Mr. Colligan stated that it was made possible by the continued growth in the company's business and recent economies in operation, including those realized through a reduction in the number of meter readings in rural territory under a bimonthly meter reading plan, in spite of the trend toward rising prices for many commodities and increasing taxes. Mr. Colligan pointed out that the taxes levied on utility companies in New York state now include direct sales taxes of from 2 1/2 per cent to 6 1/2 per cent of the amount of all customers' bills for electric service in addition to property taxes, income taxes and other taxes which are imposed on other business generally.

In explaining the new rates Mr. Colligan stated that all residence customers of the company using Wood's Bottling Works, which has been located on Broadway at East Chester street, for 89 years, will be torn down shortly and the site occupied by a modern diner costing between $15,000 and $20,000. The bottling works will be relocated in a modern concrete structure to be erected in the rear of the Wood property, and facing on Jansen avenue.

Lease to the site now occupied by the bottling plant has been signed by Irving Rubin, who operates three large diners in Newburgh at the present time, and plans to add the proposed Kingston Diner to the chain.

Possession of the site will be taken on or about April 1 of next year.

One of the largest diners operated by Mr. Rubin at the present time is Cy's Diner on Route 9-W at Broadway in Newburgh, while another is located in the Bull Market, in the former old Newburgh armory, and the third on the waterfront in that city.

The Kingston diner will be known as Cy's Diner and will be in charge of Herb Rubin, a son of Mr. Rubin. It is planned to employ all local help as far as possible in the diner and to purchase all supplies as far as possible of Kingston merchants, according to Mr. Rubin when he was seen Tuesday afternoon.

Central Business Men Hear Mayor Bemoan Lack of Industrial Space

Lack of factory space needed to house new industries in was emphasized by Mayor C. J. Heiselman speaking Tuesday evening at the 11th annual banquet of the Central Business Men's Association at the Hotel Eichler on Railroad avenue. The banquet was the largest attended in the history of the association.

The mayor called attention to a meeting to be held next week by the industrial committee at the city hall at which time the problem of providing factory space needed to induce industries to locate in the city will be discussed, and he invited every member of the association to attend the meeting.

The date of the meeting will be announced in the newspapers said the mayor, who declared that the only available factory space in Kingston at the present time was the second floor of the Bull Market on Smith avenue.

In opening his brief address, the mayor, who was introduced by President Harry E. Walker, who presided as toastmaster, called attention to the fact that the last time he had addressed the Central Association at a banquet was when better street lighting was discussed. Since then better street lighting had been installed along Broadway as well as in the uptown and downtown business sections.

At that time the mayor recalled the members of the associations had urged the purchase of a snow remover for use in the central section of the city. "I am happy now to tell you," said the mayor, "that the board of public works this afternoon decided to purchase the

Area Recruiting Shows Progress, Behrens Reports

Continued progress is being shown in recruiting activities of the local units of the 156th Field Artillery, First Battalion Headquarters Battery and Battery A of this city toward attainment of its quota of additional recruits allotted in connection with the recently authorized 20 per cent strength expansion of the National Guard.

Captain Charles N. Behrens in charge of the local units announced yesterday that thus far 18 new recruits had been enlisted in this city, leaving a few vacancies remaining yet to be filled under the new quotas.

Statewide recruiting figures showed a further net gain of 377 during the week ended November 4, according to word received at the local armory from Brig. Gen. Walter G. Robinson, adjutant general of the state. These figures, added to previous gains since recruiting efforts were begun, bring the total net gain to 1,519, or approximately 35 per cent of the state's quota, General Robinson announced.

General Robinson, pointing to the substantial gains in the Guard's personnel that have been recorded each week, declared that "there never has been any question but that the required increases will be met" and looked forward optimistically to greater gains during the next few weeks.

Young men desiring to enlist in the local units of the Guard may do so either Monday, Tuesday or Thursday evenings at 8 o'clock when an officer in charge of recruiting will be present.

EUROPEAN FEDERATIONS

A "United States of Europe", which some people consider the only solution to Europe's troubles, has been discussed for at least twenty-five years with little practical effect. Moritz Bohn, an international economist and, after the World War, adviser to the German government on reparations, sees the development of such a union as neither an immediate prospect nor a vain hope. He thinks it will come, but only after much more preparatory work.

"Don't strive for world union now," he says. "Let's start when the war is over to build loosely-knit regional economic federations of nations."

It is his idea that certain European nations have obviously common interests and could complement each other's resources and supply each other's needs naturally and easily if they worked as a group.

Such groups seem already to be forming. The most successful so far is the Oslo Conference, composed of Belgium, Luxembourg, Denmark, Finland, the Netherlands, Norway and Sweden. It was organized in 1931 "to restore international trade through mutual reduction of tariffs, quotas and other restrictions." Similarly the Balkan and Danubian groups have mutual interests and could cooperate. Use of the Danube used to be free to all nations and navigation on it was controlled by an international commission.

Cooperation among such logical groups might well be promoted first, with the greater federation coming later, based on experience.

A "PHONY WAR"

The allied democracies have been accused of trying to fight a "phony war", by people who think more blood should flow. Their strategy is evidently regarded as tricky or cowardly when it should be courageous. But Walter Lippmann, ace columnist and student of history and military tactics, insists that this is "exactly the kind of war to wage against the revolutionary imperialists." He says in the New York Herald Tribune:

"By such a war there can be won all that can be won by anybody in a war between modern states. This phony war alone attacks the source of its trouble, which is not Germany nor the German nation's need to expand its influence and commerce, but the power of Hitler and the Nazi party to over-awe Germany and Europe."

Such a war, he maintains, is capable of bringing the Nazis to their knees without sacrificing a generation of young men and impoverishing western Europe.

The problem just now, however, is whether Hitler will permit such an economic struggle as a substitute for military conflict. He seems lately to be bent on fighting, if he can keep the support of the German people.

OUTMODDED WAR

Many observers are busy comparing the present war in Europe—which may prove, after all, not to be a world war—with the war of 1914-1918. Emil Ludwig, German author, writes to The Nation from Locarno: "The noiselessness with which this war begins is affecting. In the region where its greatest battles may be expected, armies are marching toward each other almost in silence. There has been no declaration of war on culture. Who in France today would propose a boycott of German music?"

"A second difference between this and the last war I find in the divisions that cut across national lines. The foreign legions which are being formed everywhere to fight against the motherland—are they not a symbol of the anachronism of exalted national feeling? If all troops on both sides carried their own flag, as they used to do, and a Martian looked down at them through his opera glass, he would laugh and ask who really was fighting whom?"

The war is different because the world is different. We have "got wise" to a lot of things, including the supreme folly of war. If humanity learns in the next twenty-five years to make effective use of what it learned in the last quarter-century, it may begin to solve its problems reasonably. It is really through with war, but doesn't know how to lay down that outmoded instrument and fumbles in use of the substitutes at hand.

SELF-SUFFICIENT HOME

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology is building on its campus, for experimental purposes, a house that will be in some respects the most modern dwelling in America. Its big trick is to capture "solar radiation," otherwise known as sunshine, in glass "heat traps" on the roof. This solar heat will be stored in insulated tanks in the basement, presumably in the form of hot water, and will be expected to keep the house warm in the winter.

The plan already has been tried in a small way by some private experimenters in this country. Apparently there is no reason why, in any place which has plenty of sunshine, homes cannot be built with special roofs and tanks to serve such a purpose. It may even be possible to turn the heat into a form that can be concentrated or "stepped up" and used for cooking.

Some experiments made in hot climates have shown, too, the possibility of turning solar heat directly into electric power, by the use of metal plates. We might yet see this idea applied in our sunnier states.

SEVEN SAFE MONTHS

On November 2 the commercial air lines of the United States announced they had flown 500,000,000 passenger-miles without a fatality or even a serious injury to any passenger or crew member. It means that, in the last seven months when this record was made, American air lines carried more than 1,250,000 passengers; and flew 52,000,000 miles with complete safety. They also carried large quantities of mail and express. It was equivalent to 2,000 trips around the world.

The safety is the most striking element of the record. Total mileage is bound to increase rapidly with more scheduled flights on old routes and rapid development of new routes. But the two things go together. If safety were not so greatly increased there would not be the demand for expansion of lines and service.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

One of the hard things to understand is why one individual with very high blood pressure (hypertension) continues on his way in good health year after year, whereas another with the same, or even lower, pressure may suffer an attack with his heart, bloodvessels, or kidneys, from which he never completely recovers.

It is now believed that high blood pressure is just a symptom of some underlying condition or disturbance of one or more organs in the body and the blood pressure must be high to overcome these conditions or obstacles. That one can possess this high pressure for years without serious disturbance and another cannot, may be due to one inheriting strong blood vessels and the other being not so fortunate.

While there are a few drugs used in the treatment of high blood pressure, most physicians place chief reliance on just one thing, that is mental and physical rest.

Drs. Nelson W. Barker and Robert W. Graham in the Mayo Clinic number of Medical Clinics of North America state:

"It has long been recognized that rest and the reduction of nervous stress and strains are important in the treatment of hypertensive patients. In cases of patients with high blood pressure should be advised to get plenty of sleep at night, to take a short rest following their noon meal, to avoid excitement, and, if possible, limit their business responsibilities. When the patients are young, it may be possible for them to select occupations which will cause but little nervous strain. In cases of severe or advanced hypertension, further nervous relaxation may be obtained by prolonged quiet vacations, warm climate in winter if possible, the use of hot baths, and occasional days spent in bed."

Drs. Barker and Graham, in stressing the importance of rest of mind particularly, make this suggestion: "In general (there may be exceptional cases of course) the physician should allay the patient's anxiety concerning his disease. There is no justification for giving the patient a gloomy outlook or talking about the likelihood of a stroke as anxiety may be a definite factor in increasing the already high blood pressure."

The thought then when blood pressure is high is not to be asking your physician about a drug to reduce the pressure but to try to prevent any further rise by keeping mind and body at rest.

Hospital Work Is Just One Part Of the Red Cross's Huge Job

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS, its responsibilities increased by the European war, is driving to increase its present membership of 5,666,680. Red Cross activities, some of them shown here, are surprisingly varied. For example (right) the organization is the largest non-commercial translator of literature into Braille for the blind.

THERE ARE 44,479 nurses ready for emergency service in the Red Cross—a larger nursing reserve than it ever had before. Approximately 20,000 Red Cross nurses saw service in the World War. Nurses are busy even when there is no emergency. New York women (below) now are working on Christmas gifts for disabled veterans and their children.

VOLUNTEER drivers (above), working two days or more each week, supply transportation to all departments of the Red Cross, and also aid in transporting cripples to clinics for treatment. During the past year the Red Cross gave aid in 157 domestic disasters. This involved sending 356 nurses to scenes of trouble in 15 states.

GRAY LADIES (left) from the Red Cross distribute magazines, stationery, and good cheer to hospitalized men of the army and navy. The Red Cross War Service is an official adjunct of the regular military forces. The Red Cross last year helped 150,605 disabled veterans and 10,653 active service men in solving social-economic problems.

Troublesome Stamps

Stamps of Argentina, Ireland, Bolivia, and Paraguay that brought protests because of the territory covered.

Stamps frequently cause international rows. Since the World War, some nations have even issued stamp maps that included territory claimed by other nations. For example:

Argentina—Out in the Atlantic Ocean 250 miles from the lower tip of Argentina's mainland are 100 islands. On most maps they are called the Falkland Islands and described as a British Crown Colony. But to Argentines they are the Malvinas.

In 1933 the Falklands issued a commemorative of the centenary of the islands' occupation by the British. Apparently still irked over this stamp in 1936, the Argentines put out a stamp showing a map of South America. The islands were included as a part of Argentina. In 1937 Argentina revised the map on the stamp by removing lines outlining other nations—but did not alter the shading of the islands, despite British protests.

Only recently, there have been reports that Argentina might try to grab the islands, now that Britain is preoccupied with war.

Ireland—Soon after Britain granted Ireland dominion status in 1922, the Irish issued a set of map-stamps showing their resentment that Ulster was not included. The map showed the whole island as a part of Eire. Residents and officials of Ulster howled, but Eire was unmoved.

Nicaragua—This country helped itself to a big slab of its neighbor, Honduras, when it issued a set of map-stamps in 1937. Several hundred square miles were bitten out of Honduras' southern border area. Honduras complained in vain.

So Honduras refused to accept letters from Nicaragua bearing these stamps. Leaders of the two countries talked of war, but gradually cooled off.

Paraguay vs. Bolivia—These two countries spent 100 years feuding over the almost worthless Chaco jungle, which both claimed. The squabble broke into open warfare in the early 30's. More than 100,000 men were killed.

During this Gran Chaco war both countries issued stamps with maps claiming the jungle. Bolivia came first with a map including the Chaco in its territory. Paraguay retorted with a map-stamp showing the Chaco with the sweeping label, "Chaco Paraguayo." Then Bolivia rebutted with a stamp-map of Bolivia with the Chaco portion labeled "Chaco Boliviano."

The war finally was settled not by stamps nor bullets, but by arbitration. Late last year a commission formed by six neutral countries brought peace to the Chaco by setting a common border which gave three-quarters of the disputed area to Paraguay. Bolivia agreed to the verdict.

Congress Will Give Lot of Time to Discussing Third Term for Presidents; Resolution Is Planned
By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Nov. 15.—Almost from the very outset of the next session of Congress there is going to be a controversy over whether Presidents of the United States shall serve three terms.

The issue will be precipitated by the introduction of a resolution formally to amend the constitution of the United States so as to limit presidential tenure to two terms. For a long time there have been proposals pending to limit the presidency to a single term of six years, but they have got nowhere and it is doubtful whether the plan of a single term of four or six years has made headway. The traditional two term idea, of course, is well established and if it were put to a vote in the next session of Congress in both Houses there would very likely be an interesting series of consequences.

First of all, the members of Congress who feel that President Roosevelt ought not to run for a third term would support a resolution fixing two terms. For while there has never been a third term President no provision of the constitution has ever been written to prevent third terms.

Debate over a constitutional amendment would mean a raising at an early date of the issue on which the campaign would be fought. If the Democrats were able to block passage—and they would have to assemble only one vote more than one-third of either House to accomplish such an obstruction—the mere fact that a substantial majority of both Houses favored the proposal would be an important psychological influence with the country. This issue might dwarf into insignificance all other considerations and arouse public attention long before the nominating conventions were held.

Curiously enough, the proposal to limit presidential tenure comes from independent or conservative Democratic sources, where there is a feeling that a third term, if granted, merely means a fourth term endeavor and ultimately a system whereby each President will feel he can use the governmental machinery to perpetuate himself in office.

If there were a law requiring presidential preference primaries to do the nominating and convention were abolished so that the people did the nominating, less objection would be heard to third terms because any popular expression by the people would be regarded as of much more validity.

A resolution merely expressing the Senate's opinion, however, has no formal effect and is only a gesture. Hence many members who really would have voted for an amendment to the constitution limiting the presidential tenure felt justified in recording themselves opposed to an expression-of-opinion resolution. Next January a concrete proposal to amend the Constitution to limit the presidency to two terms is going to be pushed and the issue will have to be met on its merits.

Chapter 34
Gordon's Dugout

"I WANT my husband's love letters— from another woman," said Mrs. Murchison.

"I can see that you wouldn't want us to read those letters," said Tuck thoughtfully. "But, when we have already seen them, why didn't you come and ask for them, instead of sneaking here like this to look for them?"

Mrs. Murchison was silent, with heaving bosom and flashing eyes. She stared at Tuck defiantly.

"You may as well come downstairs," Tuck said gently. "We haven't the letters any longer, Mrs. Murchison. They are down at the police station."

The shot struck home. The angry defiance faded in a moment, and stark fear took its place.

"The police?" she whispered.

"Yes, you see—they want very much to know where your husband is. If you say it is true if you can prove it, then the matter will be closed as far as they are concerned. You might better have told them the truth at the beginning."

Mrs. Murchison said nothing. She went slowly down the stairs, her footsteps faltering and uneven. At the foot of the stairs she turned.

"I cannot prove it," she muttered. "I do not know who she is."

"Well, then," Tuck said, "don't worry about it. Let the police prove it."

They watched her as she went slowly home on the curving path; up the steps and into that other silent house.

Tuck looked at Bunney. "She doesn't know yet about Miss Lissy, does she?"

"She couldn't know. She wouldn't dare act this way if she did. There is Michael's car, Tuck."

They met him in the sun porch. He had left the car in the driveway and came striding up the path to the house. As he came through the door he looked at each of them, and said quickly, "Thank God!"

"For what, Michael?"

"Tuck, you crazy little cat, why did you go out into the woods when I expressly told you not to?"

"That's no way to talk to a woman, even if she is your wife, Michael. Forgive me, Tuck said hotly.

"And anyway, how did you know?"

"Charlotte Jean. She phoned me at the police station, and said that you were lost in the woods, and that she had the murderer locked in your clothes closet. What did she mean?"

"Tuck, Tuck, Tuck, will skin that girl. I will flay her!"

"Oh, no you won't. I'm going to give her fifty cents. You're worth nearly that much to me. Tuck, Tuck, Tuck, you look just bursting full of talk."

So he heard the story.

Aggrieved

AFTER lunch Michael left the house for a walk—"to think things over," he told the girls. He made his way directly through the trees to Freddie's grave, which he knew to contain nothing but an empty box. Presumably Gordon did not know that the body of his pet had been stolen. That theft was explained to himself, but he did not stop to think about it. He had another mission.

Beyond the grave he stood a moment at the edge of a little path that ran along the edge of the trees—a very faint little path that might have been made by animals going down to the water to drink. The river swirled and splashed below him, and the wind made a gentle singing in the tops of the pines. Michael stepped into the little path and followed it. It was not so easy to follow, lying as it did along the "creep" clay bank. His weight kept dislodging the tufts of grass and roots which had been the footholds, and he was forced to grasp at the overhanging bushes to keep his balance. In a moment the bank angled out to another small promontory, and Michael flattened himself against the bank as he slipped around the corner. The path was not more than a narrow ledge of rock here.

As he turned the corner he came upon the object of his search, but not quite directly. In the angle of the bank hung a big piece of heavy burlap; it had been looted back with a nail, and there behind it was a cave, followed out of the clay; which immediately disclosed itself as half a barrel sat Gordon Deane.

Michael grinned. Gordon looked up and their eyes met. Gordon was stunned. He opened his mouth and shut it again. He stared.

"Hello!" said Michael. "Any notions if I see you in 'Tuck's dugout'?"

"Hello, Gordon!" said Gordon. "You found it, now?"

"Looked for it," said Michael. "I was here last night."

"Gordon looked at him shrewdly. "Well, you wouldn't you? Is the murderer a friend of yours? Or do you enjoy living in this blood-stained atmosphere?"

"The boys' law frightened 'He sure is not a friend of mine," he said. "After what he did to me, I'd like to get some of that down his throat and put it in his meat."

"I don't feel exactly that way about 'Tuck," Michael said candidly. "But I'm not exactly anxious to wake up some morning, and find out that 'Tuck's dugout' is a trap."

"Hex killed Edgar Murchison," Michael said. "And Fred, and Miss Lissy. We could be here at the bottom of the river, water over our heads, and 'Tuck's' in the middle of the process somewhere."

farther, and entered the cave. He looked around him.

This was in reality little more than a deep hollow, dug out laboriously, for the marks of tools were still in the walls. Along the back ran a few boards on top of a clay ledge left for them, and in front of the table thus formed was Gordon's chair. On the table stood an old coal oil lamp, with a blackened chimney.

"Pretty nice place you've got here," Michael went on with interest. "But it took a lot of work to make it."

"How'd you find it?" Gordon asked in an aggrieved tone.

"Did you ever hear the story about the lost horse?" Michael asked him as he sat comfortably down on the floor.

"What lost horse?"

"Well, once there was a horse, and it lost itself, and nobody could find it until a half-witted kid went out and brought it in. And they asked him how he did it, and he said he just thought if he was a horse where would he go, and he went there, and the horse was found."

"Hain't got anything to do with my cave, has it?" Gordon asked scornfully.

"Well, not exactly. Except that you're the horse."

Gordon's short was eloquent. "If I had been you, you see," Michael went on, "I'd have certainly dug me out a hole here if I could have got a little 'Tuck' to see you had."

"Help!"

"Didn't you?"

"Wizard Or Something?"

GORDON stared. "Oh, gosh," he said at last, "are you one of those wizards or something? Do you have to know everything?"

"Nearly. Don't be so dumb, Gordon. You know what I'm doing out here. It's my job to find things out. As a matter of fact, I happened to be on the bank above here one night when you had the light on, and I saw the reflection in the river. I'm not spying on you. But if I did, you'd have to admit that I had a right to. You've had yourself open to me."

Gordon's face was pale. "How'd you know?" he began.

"Can it?" he said crisply. "I'll tell you what I know, and I'll tell you too that you're not going to be hung for it, not for a couple of days anyway." He ticked the items off on his fingers. "First, you wrote a letter on your father's typewriter to the Police Commissioner asking where Professor Murchison's diamonds are. Then, when the Commissioner didn't seem to do anything about it, you gathered unto yourself several dispirited and so on, and hung them on the outside of your doors while you did unlawfully enter the study and search for them—the diamonds, of course."

All this, because your friend and satellite, Higgins, did discover a gold watch lying on the path with a piece of bloody paper beside it, and perhaps for diverse reasons unknown to me. Is it not so, my young friend?"

"Oh, gosh," said Gordon again. "Most inelegant," Michael commented. "Isn't that true?"

Gordon gulped. "I—I guess so."

"Would you get the key?"

Gordon did not answer.

"Very well," said Michael. "What were you going to do for? For ret out the mystery, and find the jewels, and claim the reward?"

"Absolutely. But is there?"

"I doubt it. You see, Gordon, I found them."

"Honest and true?"

"Shucks, Oh, well."

"Very philosophical indeed. Quite a commendable attitude."

Michael looked at him keenly. "How much do you know, youngster?" he demanded.

Gordon eyed him thoughtfully. "Not about."

"Not about everything. Do you happen to know who murdered Edgar Murchison, for instance?"

"That might be helpful."

"Nope. I don't know that. But I bet I could guess without much trouble."

"Guesses are quite, quite useless. I've been guessing for some time now, with very little success. Something you tell me what makes you guess, and I'll do the guessing. How's that?"

Gordon looked at him shrewdly. "Well, would I tell you what I know?"

"Well, you wouldn't you? Is the murderer a friend of yours? Or do you enjoy living in this blood-stained atmosphere?"

"The boys' law frightened 'He sure is not a friend of mine," he said. "After what he did to me, I'd like to get some of that down his throat and put it in his meat."

Milk Is Discussed At Monthly Parley Of Health Officers

Dr. Fred H. Voss presided during the session of the Board of Health Tuesday night, Mayor Heiselmann being detained by the annual dinner of the Central Business Men's Association, where he was one of the speakers.

Mayor Heiselmann arrived just in time to get in on another discussion of the old question as to the desirability of unpasteurized milk. At the last meeting of the board, in October, the sanitary code was amended so as to permit extension of time until December 15 in which certified milk may be sold in the city without being pasteurized.

Last night Mayor Heiselmann reiterated his stand taken at a former meeting, to the effect that such sale should be permitted. He said that he had gone on record as holding that those who desired raw milk should be permitted to secure it and that he still was taking that same position. The Mayor said that he did not wish to be dictatorial, either as to what people should eat or drink, or as to what action the board should take in the matter, but that so far as he personally was concerned he believed that people who wanted certified raw milk should have it.

Winston Is Present
R. H. Winston of the Saugerties Dairy Farms, who supplies Kingston with certified milk, was present. He told the board that he had around 160 customers in Kingston for the certified raw milk which he has been distributing, adding that in his opinion some 80 per cent of them objected to the proposed change which would force pasteurization of the milk. Personally he saw no necessity for it. He added, however, that he had completed installation of pasteurizing machinery and was prepared to deliver the certified milk pasteurized when the new law went into effect on December 15.

No further action was taken in the matter although it was indicated that there might be another show of hands on the question at the next meeting of the board when there was a full attendance of members.

The next meeting of the board will be the budget meeting and it was urged that every member be present on that occasion.
The secretary read a communication from an out of town meat dealer regarding delivery of meat in the city. On motion of Commissioner Beck, and on the advice of Dr. Sanford and Inspector Foley, the matter was held up until more complete information could be had regarding the inspection of meat at the plant in question.

Sanford's Report
Submitting his monthly report Dr. Lester E. Sanford, health officer, said that the clinics held in the city during the month had been highly successful. It was also noted that the report on communicable diseases was very favorable.

Reportable diseases included one case each of typhoid fever (a non-resident), chicken pox, whooping cough, Vincent's Angina, measles and undulant fever. There were two cases of scarlet fever and three of pneumonia. In October last year there were 46 cases of whooping cough and 17 cases of pneumonia.

There were 53 births during the month, of which 23 were non-resident. Deaths totaled 46, of which 19 were non-resident. There was no infant mortality during the month whereas in October last year the infant mortality was 42.5.

Deaths during October were from the following causes:
Apoplexy 1
Asthma 1
Arteriosclerosis 2
Appendicitis 1
Carcinoma 1
Cerebral Hemorrhage 3
Cardiac Decompensation 5
Cardiac Syncope 1
Concussion of Brain 1
Coronary Occlusion 1
Drowning (Suicide) 2
Embolism 1
Gastric Ulcer, Perforated 1
Gun Shot Wound (Suicide) 1
Gun Shot Wound (Homicide) 1
Leukemia 1

Pernicious Anemia, Pregnancy 1
Pulmonary Hemorrhage 1
Broncho Pneumonia 1
Poisoning (Accidental) Jimson Weed 1
Surgical Shock 1
Tuberculosis 1
Thrombosis 3

Total 43
The Bureau of Child Hygiene reported 744 cases under care for health supervision; 512 field visits made during the month and 153 visits where no one was at home. The public health nurse reported, among other activities, assistance at clinics in which the following treatments had been given: Vaccination, 137; toxoid, 57; syphilis, 94.

Public to Get Opportunity To Inspect Loan Building

A public inspection of the new Savings and Loan Association of Kingston building on Wall street, adjacent to the Kingston Savings Bank, will be held Tuesday, November 21, from 2 until 9 p. m. At that time the public will be given the opportunity to inspect the new building which is practically complete and will in future house the offices of the association.

On Monday evening, November 20, a dinner for the officers and directors of the association and guests will be held at the Governor Clinton Hotel when numerous banking officials, Building and Loan Association officials and friends will celebrate the completion of the new building.

The present offices in the Cordis building at 293 Wall street, will be closed and the association will move into the new home at 269 Wall street next Monday. Since its establishment in 1902 the association has occupied offices in rented quarters. Recently a move was made to erect a permanent home for the association and the new Colonial design building which will become the new home next Monday is the result.

On the main floor are office facilities, counting room and vaults with a spacious lobby. On the upper floor are storage closets for supplies, a second vault and a large directors' room.

At the dinner Monday evening at Governor Clinton Hotel will be officers and directors of the Savings and Loan Association of Kingston and numerous banking officials. Loan association officials and representatives from nearby groups.

Among those who have signed their intention of accepting the invitation of the directors is Judge Bolton of Oneonta, president of the New York State Savings and Loan League; Zebulon Woodard, executive vice-president of the league; Francis Luderman, deputy superintendent of banks of New York state; John Fitzpatrick, a past president of the league; John M. Bush, also a past president of the league, and president of the Poughkeepsie Savings and Loan Association; LeGrand Pellet, director of the Savings and Loan Bank and president of the Newburgh Savings and Loan Association, and several of the local bank executives.

Today the final touches were being put on the work of getting the building ready and it is expected that the work will be completed and all furnishings installed by Monday of next week when the business of the association will be transacted from the new home.

Several kinds of nut trees will grow well in New York state, especially the black walnut. A. Cornell bulletin, P-573, tells about planting nut trees, and residents of the state may have single copies free by writing to the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

It is also well known in Newburgh as an athlete.
Employs 20 Persons
Mr. Rubin said that in his Newburgh diner he was employing a force of 20 persons.
The diner here will be kept open day and night.
Mr. Wood in confirming the lease of the site to Mr. Rubin told briefly of his plan to erect a modern and up-to-date bottling plant in the rear of the property, facing on Jansen avenue. The building, he said, would be constructed of concrete blocks.

The demolishing of the present old landmark will not interfere with the bottling business as Mr. Wood is planning to continue as at present turning out beverages that have become famous in Kingston and the surrounding territory for nearly a century.

CARD PARTY POSTPONED
The card party which was to have been held in Red Men's Hall, Esopus, Friday evening, Nov. 17, has been postponed indefinitely due to the death of Alexander Smith.

Interested in Athletics
Mr. Rubin is widely known in Newburgh where he is deeply interested in athletics of all kinds, and at the present time is sponsoring bowling and basketball teams, who play under the name of C's Diners.
His son, Herb Rubin, who will have charge of the Kingston diner.

at once. The work has already been approved by the WPA as a project.

Property owners will pay for the improvement at the rate of a dollar a foot. If their property has a brook frontage it will cost them $30. The time of payment on the part of the property owner is extended over a five-year period.

Snow Loader Purchased
At the present time the board owns two snow loaders and during heavy storms one loader is placed at work uptown and one downtown. It was decided that another loader was needed for the central section of the city, and the board took action toward purchasing a third loader.

City to Lay Curb
The board also adopted a resolution directing the street department to proceed with the work of laying curb and sidewalk on Chambers street, between Nos. 90 and 140.

It was stated that in 1938 the property owner had been directed to do this work or it would be done by the city and charged to them. So far, it was stated, they had failed to do the work.

The labor on the job does not cost the property owner a cent, but the property owner must purchase and pay for the curbing and sidewalk stones.

Object to Dust Collectors
City Engineer James G. Norton sent in a communication to the board regarding the use of dust collectors for the rock drillers. He wrote that the state labor department objected to the use of the dust collectors that had been made by the city employees on the ground that they did not meet the specifications of that department.

On October 24 the department sent two men here to make tests but the amount of the dust in the test shanty was of such a quantity that they stated it would be unnecessary to take a sample.

"We have been ordered" wrote the city engineer "not to do any drilling by the field inspector and also by written order of the department. The trenches being dug for sewers on Lucas avenue, Linderman avenue and other streets are in rock and progress is very slow as only paving breakers and hand work can be used."

"The WPA foremen have been instructed by their office not to allow any drilling on the jobs. The purchase of two acceptable dust collectors will meet the requirements of the state labor department and the WPA."

"We will continue to operate as at present unless otherwise directed."

Progress on Laboratory
City Engineer Norton submitted a report on WPA progress on various projects in the city. He reported that work on the addition to the city laboratory was approximately 70 per cent completed.

At the stadium the entire area between the track and the slope in the outfield had been regraded; 400 cubic yards of top soil had been placed and re-seeded. 29 maple trees and 27 Arbor Vitae had been planted. Also had removed 400 cubic yards of excavated rock from the south end of the stadium.

and other work had also been done.
At Block Park there had been placed 140 cubic yards of concrete 6 inches thick in skating rink; 600 cubic yards of gravel placed; 300 cubic yards of top soil placed and dug 150 lineal feet of sewer trench. A total of 5,534 square feet of sidewalk was laid and the work included old as well as new walks. 2,536 feet of new water lines had been laid in Van Gaasbeck street, Hemlock avenue, Meadow street and Wilbur avenue.

There was also laid 868 feet of new sewer in Linderman avenue, Melrose street, Hillsworth avenue and Lucas avenue.

WHO'D BLAME THE BIRD?—Contrary to plan, this turkey got loose during a re-enactment of the first Thanksgiving at Plymouth, Mass., and Norman Gifford, 12, retrieved the bird. Plymouth will observe the Nov. 30 Thanksgiving.

INSIDE STORY OF A PISTOL—The inefficiency of an old-fashioned pistol shows up well in this picture, made at the incredible exposure of one-millionth of a second by Dr. Harold E. Edgerton of M.I.T. Note how much of the explosive force escaped from sides of gun. The bullet is not the projecting rod shown; it is just emerging, cannot be seen for the smoke.

Hurley Residents Invited to Movie By Walter Reade

Announcement is made by the Reade Theatres management in Kingston that Walter Reade invites the people of the Village of Hurley to be his guests at any performance of "Drums Along the Mohawk" next Monday, November 20. Special tickets are being printed, and may be obtained at the Elmendorf store in Hurley. These tickets are absolutely free and one to each resident of the village.

Mr. Reade likes Ulster county and its people. Since he first saw the village of Hurley he has always declared that no portion of America has more of story and patriotic tradition attached to it than the short stretch of roadway, about two miles west of Kingston, which constitutes Old Hurley. The fact that the Committee of Safety, after the burning of Kingston, held their sessions from November 18, 1777, until December 17 of that year, in the old Johannes Van Deusen house; that this old house, still standing on the north side of the street practically as it was in Revolutionary days, was for a month the state capital building; and that Hurley itself was for the same period the capital of New York state—all these things impressed themselves indelibly on Walter Reade's mind.

Because "Drums Along the Mohawk" pictures a brave, resolute people strikingly similar in patriotic ardor to the Revolutionary residents of Hurley, Mr. Reade thinks it fitting that the people living in the Hurley of today should see how the patriots along the Mohawk met and overcame the horror of torch and tomahawk in the 18th century.

"Drums Along the Mohawk" to be previewed Friday night at the Broadway, stars Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda in a technicolor masterpiece based on the historical novel by Walter D. Edmonds. Edna May Oliver, Eddie Collins and John Carradine are among the superb supporting cast. John Ford directed the picture, of which Howard Barnes in the Herald-Tribune says: "An absorbing and moving photoplay. Has preserved the full spirit of the novel."

A scientific diet has served to take thousands of pounds off railroad trains in the past ten years. With the increased competition of other forms of travel and hauling, railroads have had to find ways to speed up and provide better service than ever before in their history. The first hurdle in the speeding up process was the tremendous weight of locomotives and cars. Lightweight steel, new types of construction and other factors knocked many tons of deadweight off passenger trains.

Six Are Sentenced In County Court By Judge Inman

Six defendants appeared in county court this morning and on pleas of guilty were sentenced by Judge Inman of Columbia county, holding the present term in the place of Judge Traver who is ill.

Wessel Broadhead of Cottekill was arraigned on a charge of unlawful possession of a revolver on May 31. William H. Grogan appeared for Broadhead and a plea of guilty was entered. Mr. Grogan stated to the court that Broadhead had owned the gun for many years and had it in his house wrapped up in paper and did not know it was a violation of the law to own a gun without obtaining a license. Judge Inman suspended sentence in the case, saying that apparently Broadhead had no intent to violate the law.

John Roosa of Kingston was arraigned on a charge of assault, second degree, growing out of a fracas on Cornell street on July 2. William A. Kaercher appeared for him and a plea of not guilty was entered. Bail was continued and 20 days allowed to make further motions.

Sentence Suspended

Sherman DeLong of Glenford, who pleaded guilty Monday to possession of a revolver without a proper license, was sentenced to a year in jail and sentence was suspended during good behavior. He was placed on probation. DeLong, married, and the father of a small child, admitted that his trouble had been from drinking and the court stated that he understood that DeLong had since discontinued excessive drinking. Judge Inman cautioned DeLong to continue this policy.

Julia R. Brown, of Elmhurst, L. I., who was charged with forgery growing out of check transactions in Kingston, changed her plea to guilty to petit larceny. William H. Grogan appeared for her and a plea of not guilty was entered. In sentencing Mrs. Brown to seven months in the county jail, Judge Inman said he was doing it for the protection of the woman during the cold weather. "You are more to be pitied than punished," said Judge Inman in imposing the sentence.

William Moran, 17, of Brooklyn, pleaded guilty to petit larceny and was given a suspended sentence in the New York State Vocational Institution at Cossack. William A. Kaercher appeared for the lad. Moran was placed on probation and will have his probation transferred to Kings county by Probation Officer Robert Service of Ulster county.

K. O. Miller Sentenced

Katherine O. Miller of Marlborough, charged with arson for the burning of a building on her own premises at Marlborough, pleaded guilty to arson, third degree, and was given one year in the Ulster county jail. Execution of the sentence was suspended during good behavior. Fred Stang appeared for Mrs. Miller. He said a small building on her premises had been burned but no attempt had been made to collect any insurance. There was some of her own property in the building and he asked the court to be lenient in the case.

Donald Dugan, 17, of Kingston, now at a C. C. camp, pleaded guilty to unlawful entry, changing a former plea of not guilty. He was sentenced to the New York State Vocational Institution at Cossack but the sentence was suspended during good behavior. He was placed on probation. Dugan was charged with various burglaries, among them the former Judge A. T. Clearwater property on Albany avenue. An indictment against Robert Fyfe of Kingston was dismissed. Jurors were excused for the term and court recessed until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Race News Service Suspends, Counsel Reports to Court

Chicago, Nov. 15 (AP)—The nationwide Race News Service, turf information network serving thousands of bookmakers across the country, will suspend business today, counsel for the system announced in federal court.

Attorney Weymouth Kirkland informed Judge James H. Wilkerson that the 38 offices of the vast agency would close some time during the day but he said the exact hour for the shutdown had not yet been fixed.

Kirkland made the statement after the last legal obstacle to abandonment of the race news empire dominated by M. L. Annenberg had been removed.

This was accomplished when the jurist, acting on the request of Annenberg's counsel, dismissed petitions for injunctions restraining the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the Western Union and the Illinois Bell Telephone Company from withdrawing their wires from Nationwide News, Inc.

Kirkland told the judge that Annenberg had decided to dissolve the system linking race tracks and betting rooms throughout the nation because of government opposition to its operations.

Utility Firm Has $107,000 Fee Cut Plan for Next Year

over 135 kilowatt hours a month will receive reductions running up to 22¢ a bill. This will be effected by cutting the charge for usage between 135 and 150 kilowatt hours from 3½¢ to 2¢ a kilowatt hour which is the rate now effective for usage over 150 kilowatt hours a month.

For commercial electric service the principal rate is being considerably modified so that more bills will be based solely on the quantity of electricity consumed and the demand, or maximum usage at any one time, will be considered only when this results in a lower charge to the customer.

Where the monthly usage of commercial customers is small, the new rate will be similar to company's present residence rate and the charges will be substantially equal to those under the residence rate. Where the usages are greater, the charges will be figured under a reduced rate based solely on the consumption of electricity and under a revised rate also based in part on the demand and the customer will then receive a bill for the lower amount.

About 80 per cent of the company's commercial customers will share the benefits of this revision in the commercial rate which will be applied in figuring all bills rendered to them after January 1, 1940. In some instances bills to the remaining customers would be slightly increased under the revised rate, but in such cases the old rate will apply until February 28, 1941, unless the conditions of use change so that the new rate becomes more advantageous to these customers in the meantime.

Rules relating to service on rural lines are also revised in the new schedule so that rural minimum charges of $3.00 or less will be eliminated after January 1, 1940 on all rural lines which are more than five years old. This revision will enable an increasing proportion of rural residents and farm customers to obtain electric service subject to the same minimum charges which are effective in the cities and densely settled territory served by the Central Hudson Company.

Swiss immigrant, and enlarged by his seven American-born sons. Murry Guggenheim was the third of those sons, born in Philadelphia August 12, 1858. He entered the firm of M. Guggenheim's Sons when it was established in 1881, and remained with it after it became Guggenheim Brothers in 1915.

Bad Debt Brought Wealth

As it is often told, the story of the origin of that vast mining concern begins with a tale typical of American business romance. Meyer Guggenheim as a young man plodded from house to house selling shoe-blacking from a pack on his back. Soon, instead of buying his shoe-blacking from a jobber, he began to manufacture his own. From that beginning grew a business devoted to importing and selling lace.

In exchange for a debt, the story continues, Meyer Guggenheim, the lace dealer, took some mining properties in Colorado, sight unseen. He sent two of his sons west to investigate the value of the claims, and the Guggenheim lace company became a mining enterprise.

As a young man, Murry Guggenheim spent much of his time at the smelters in Colorado. Later he became the company's sales expert, when its interests were merged with those of the American Smelting and Refining Company in 1901.

Wife Shared Interests

The company dealt in everything from Mexican silver to fuller's earth. In its later years Guggenheim Brothers, in which Murry Guggenheim was a senior partner, abandoned active operation of mining properties.

At one time or another Murry Guggenheim was a director of the Utah Copper Co., Nevada Northern Railway Co., Nevada Consolidated Copper Co., New River Collieries Co., Yukon Gold Co., Anglo-Chilean Consolidated Nitrate Corporation, Kennecott Copper Corporation and Keno Hill, Ltd.

He married Leonie Bernheim March 15, 1887. Together they created the Murry and Leonie Guggenheim Foundation, a $3,000,000 fund from which their dental clinic was built in 1931, and with Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, the "Dr. Edwin Franko Goldman band concerts" were donated to the city.

Mrs. Guggenheim was the daughter of Jacques Bernheim of Mulhausen, Alsace. To them were born a son, Edmond A., and a daughter, Lucille.

Japanese landing forces today started a new south China drive that promised major military developments sooner than Europe's stalemated western front, where highly equipped armies of the great powers face one another in relative inactivity.

Combined army and navy forces landed near Pakhol, on the Kwangtung coast, and headed inland against Chinese defenders.

The scene of the new Japanese drive, apparently aimed at getting a stronger grip on the south China coast, is only 75 miles east of French Indo-China and about 300 miles west of British Hongkong.

Japan "will adhere strictly to the policy hitherto pursued toward third powers," the Tokyo foreign office announced.

Japan's last offensive, a southward push in Hunan province, was repulsed by the Chinese after bitter fighting early in October.

The European war moved along principally as a conflict at sea, an economic battle and a war of nerves.

France said there was "reduced activity during the night" on the western front and Germany reported "no special events except minor local artillery fire."

A German submarine, credited by the German high command with sinking 26,000 tons of enemy shipping, returned to her base escorting an unidentified prize vessel.

New trouble flared in the protectorate which Germany created out of former Czechoslovakia. Two thousand Czech students demonstrated against the government over the death of a 24-year-old student, but were dispersed before clashing with police.

Finland greeted her delegates who returned from Moscow after failing to reach any agreement with Soviet Russia over Russian demands for territorial concessions.

Commenting on an official Soviet news agency dispatch that Finland would be forced to terms within seven months, Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, chief of the Finnish delegation, said, "such calculations are obviously erroneous. We can hold out much longer."

Chief Murphy said this morning that the second floor of the house had been badly damaged by fire and that there was considerable damage to the interior of the house by water. All of the furniture was covered with canvas by the firemen when they entered the house.

This morning Lou Merillat of the Pennington studio took several pictures of the fire at the request of the police and fire officials.

The result of the investigation was not announced.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Nov. 15 (AP)—Leading shares edged higher today in a slow moving and, at times, uncertain stock market.

Advances of around a point in some of the most-favored issues were shaded toward the final hour by profit-taking. Transactions were at the rate of 600,000 shares.

Gainers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Boeing, Glenn Martin, Anaconda, Westinghouse Electric, Santa Fe, du Pont, Caterpillar and Sears Roebuck.

Goodrich was in demand following announcement of the company's first dividend on the common since September 1937.

Final rejection by Germany of the peace proposals of the king of the Belgians and the queen of the Netherlands left Wall Street rattled but ready, to a certain extent, to capitalize on the increasingly good corporate news at home.

Foreign markets were firm but quiet. Bonds tended upward and commodities were mixed.

Higher Priced Issues Active

Trading on the New York Stock Exchange remained restricted Tuesday, with volume at 780,000 shares, but averages made one of their late infrequent appearances on the upside. Closing below their best levels for the day the Dow Jones industrials showed a gain of .70 point, to 149.77; rails were up .42, to 33.30 and utilities advanced .05, to 25.62. Leadership in the market returned to such issues as General Motors, Chrysler, steel and some of the higher priced issues rather than the cheaper stocks which have featured dealings of late.

There was lack of buying interest in the commodity markets and the index declined slightly. Cotton futures rallied in late trading and closed unchanged to four points higher. At Chicago wheat closed ½ higher to ½ lower. Rubber features eased. Due to previously imposed AAA restriction no sugar acreage sugar crops in continental U. S. will probably be around 10 per cent lower this year than last.

Leading copper producers continue to ration supplies on a price basis of 12½ cents a pound. The Troy state police barracks and the outside market, the price ranged from 13 to 13½ cents.

Trustees of the New Haven Road have petitioned the federal district court to pay $3,465,993 back interest on various issues. Payments on various underlying mortgages will bring them all up to date with the exception of Boston & New York Air Line 4½, which do not receive a payment.

Virginia Railway asks permission to split existing preferred and common shares into four shares for one old share.

Colonel Leonard P. Ayres finds that there is no doubt about the genuineness of this industrial "reel" but that there is "real doubt about the possibilities of its keeping going." Noting that stock prices advanced vigorously for nearly two weeks after the outbreak of the war, but since have been unable to surpass the levels reached in those first few days, he says that "financial barometers are recording their skepticism about the future prospects of this business revival."

Quake Shakes East

Philadelphia, Nov. 15 (AP)—A ten-second earthquake shook the eastern seaboard from Baltimore to Trenton, N. J., just before 10 o'clock last night (EST) but apparently caused no serious injuries or property damage. Seismographs at the Franklin Institute here and Fordham University, New York, placed the center of the quake at a point near Delaware river from Philadelphia. The earthquake was a vigorous one for this region but, as F. Wagner Schlesinger, in charge of Franklin Institute seismographs, put it: "A good California wouldn't have paid any attention to this at all."

$91,000 Disappears

New York, Nov. 15 (AP)—The mysterious disappearance of $91,000 in negotiable bonds a week ago from a postoffice sub-station is being investigated by police. An insurance investigator reported the loss last night.

Long Beach Mayor Is Killed, His Bodyguard Is Wounded

Long Beach, N. Y., Nov. 15 (AP)—Mayor Louis F. Edwards of Long Beach was shot and killed and his bodyguard, Patrolman James Walsh, was wounded today while on the steps of the mayor's home as he was preparing to leave for his office.

Soon afterward, Patrolman Alvin Dooley presented himself to Long Beach police for questioning. Dooley was formerly president of the Patrolman's Benevolent Association. Last week he was defeated for re-election by Patrolman Walsh, whom the mayor had favored as a candidate.

On Duty in Booth

Patrolman Dooley, 35, and married, was on duty in a police booth outside the mayor's home at the time of the shooting.

Witnesses told police that as the mayor and his bodyguard emerged Dooley suddenly drew his revolver and fired four shots at the mayor, all of which took effect.

Patrolman Walsh attempted to disarm the assailant and was shot once in the leg. He was taken to St. Peter's Hospital. Walsh's condition was described as serious.

Long Beach, a favorite bathing spot just outside of New York city, has a permanent population of approximately 6,000. In addition, thousands of New Yorkers maintain summer homes there.

Patrolman Dooley until recently had been a member of four men's motorcycle squad of four men. Because of budget economies, the squad was cut to two men. Dooley was one of the two men returned to other duties.

Mayor Edwards was about 48. He is survived by his widow, one son and four daughters.

The mayor was born in Manhattan and had lived in Long Beach 15 years. He was president of a refining company in Long Island City.

Specials of various state and county departments were brought into service and at least seven motorized launches including one especially equipped from the Troy barracks of the state police.

Various grappling crews have been working under direction of Lieutenant Henry Kator of the Troy state police barracks and among the equipment used is a complete diving outfit with Corporal Kenneth Grey standing by to go to the bottom of the river if needed. Grappling efforts so far, the officials report, have not required this measure.

Crowd Predicted For Ahavath Ball

Chairman Michael S. Strawgate of the Ahavath Israel Ball to be held in the auditorium Thanksgiving eve, Wednesday, November 22, today reported tickets selling at a rate which presages a crowd for the big social event, featuring Bunny Berigan's radio orchestra.

"Tickets are selling rapidly," said Chairman Strawgate, "and there is every indication that there will be a capacity crowd for the benefit ball and floor show." Business establishments handling tickets are Edwards jewelers, H. G. Rafalowsky, clothing, and Kingston Furniture Corp., on lower Broadway.

Chairman Strawgate is proud of the band booked for the ball and feels certain that Bunny Berigan will make a hit with all who attend the big social event Thanksgiving eve. "Berigan is a specialty performer himself," said the Ahavath Israel chairman of entertainment, "and those who attend the ball will hear him decorate his trumpet selections with some of the fanciest frills known to musicians."

Berigan will feature Day Doyle, charming radio songstress, and Danny Richards, song stylist, with his band and these two entertainers are bound to be as popular here as they have been in other cities playing engagements with the famous orchestra. And, in addition there will be Harry Hersfield, popular cartoonist, as master of ceremonies, and the Mad Russian, formerly with Eddie Cantor.

Will Ask Increase

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—The administration will ask Congress for a big increase in funds to finance the agriculture department's stamp plan of distributing surplus food among relief families, reliable sources said today. The agriculture department has set aside $70,000,000 to operate the program this year. It was reported that tentative plans were made at a White House conference yesterday to ask Congress to make two or three times that amount available for the year starting July 1, 1940. The stamp system, operative in all cities, permits families on relief to exchange a part of their money for special stamps which may be used to buy food at any grocery store.

College Club Group Hears Rev. Oudemool

The Rev. Arthur E. Oudemool, pastor of the First Reformed Church, addressed the members of the College Women's Club Tuesday evening at the regular monthly meeting held at the Huntington. The Rev. Mr. Oudemool spoke of his recent travels in France, Holland and England, stressing particularly the famous cathedrals in each country.

In preface, the Rev. Mr. Oudemool explained that the cathedrals are of interest to all travelers, whether of a religious nature or not, as the buildings are representative of man's highest achievement in architecture.

He described the architectural plans of Notre Dame, Church of the Madeleine and St. Germain in Paris, Oudekerk and Neikirk in Amsterdam and St. Paul's and Westminster in London. An interesting fact was that the interior of the First Reformed Church in this city is closely patterned after one of the aisles in St. Paul's Cathedral, London. This was explained by the fact that the architect of the local church was a pupil of Sir Christopher Wren, architect for St. Paul's.

The Rev. Mr. Oudemool also told of visits to Salisbury Cathedral and Shakespear's Church at Stratford-on-Avon, explaining the carvings and stained glass windows.

During the business meeting which preceded the address, Mrs. William F. Murray, chairman of the ticket committee for the Kaltenborn lecture Thursday evening, reported a large advance sale of tickets. Proceeds from this lecture will be used for the scholarship which is given each year to an outstanding girl of the graduating class of the high school. Tickets will be on sale at the door Thursday evening.

Miss Gladys Nickerson, chairman of the membership committee, announced applications for membership had been made by Miss Mary Matthews, B. A., Wellesley College; Miss Jane Ward, B. S., Boston University; Miss Harriet St. John, A. B., Skidmore College, and Miss Myra Maynard, B. S., Skidmore College. All were unanimously accepted into active membership.

Special meetings planned by groups for the month are the Current Events Group, which will meet November 30, at the home of Mrs. L. L. Jennings, the French Study Group, which will meet at the home of Miss Dorothy DuMont, Tuesday, November 21, and the Book Study Group, which will meet Wednesday, November 29, with Miss Lora Kinkadee.

At the conclusion of the evening's program refreshments were served. Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Theron L. Culver, chairman; Miss Julia Cook, Mrs. Frederick Combs, Mrs. George Chilton, Miss Nellie Davenport, Mrs. Stanley H. Dempsey, Mrs. Bertha Denniston, Mrs. James Devine, Mrs. David DuBois, Miss Dorothy DuMont, Miss Virginia Mullen and Mrs. Doris Monroe.

Would you do as North did, pass on the bridge hand illustrated here? If your answer's "yes," you need to get confidence, judge better the value of your hand.

See the damage wrought by timid North in a recent tournament. Though his hand held 2 1/2 quick tricks plus intermediates, a sound opening bid in any league. North stayed mum. The hand was passed out and a comfortable partnership in spades was missed. The correct bidding would be: North, 1 club; South, 1 spade; North, 2 spades; South, pass. But just missing scores is not all the damage a fainthearted player can do. At another table in the tournament, North also passed on the hand we've illustrated. But South, suspecting his partner's timidity, opened unsoundly as third hand with one spade. Ten North came to life, bid four

Advice to the Lonely

Dear Mrs. Post: I have been a widow for ten years. My two sons have been married for quite a while and my only daughter just married last year. I miss the children, especially my daughter, terribly. It's very lonesome. And I want you to tell me if you will, how often it is proper for me to go to visit them, to stay with them I mean, because all three live in different towns but none of them very far away.

Answer: I hate to answer that you must wait until your daughters-in-law invite you, and you must ask your daughter before going if it will be convenient. Never, never arrive unexpectedly. I know it's very lonely. But the one thing that each and every one of us must learn for our own salvation, as well as that of all who come in contact with us, is an outlook of point of view. By this I mean, when you find that you are thinking about your loneliness, stop it at once! Do cross-word puzzles, if necessary—anything to make you think about something else. Feeling sorry for yourself not only increases your unhappiness but it helps to bring about the very thing you could not bear to have happen—that is, to spoil your own children's pleasure in seeing you. You must make new friends or at least find new interests of your own, and not depend on your children for your sole companionship. I know this is a very hard thing to do, but no achievement is easy and there is no greater achievement than conquest of yourself.

The Clothes Borrower

Dear Mrs. Post: Will you tell me if there is any way to be tactful and say "no" at the same time. I don't know what to say when Jane, my cousin, who is just my size, comes in and wants to borrow a dress. I felt sorry for her once when she needed a dress badly and that is the way it all started, and now she has no hesitancy at all in asking for my very best dresses. It seems rude to me to come right out and say "no."

What can I do?
Answer: It is inexcusable to ask to borrow clothes, ever. Of course, I don't mean derelicts allowed to hang in a closet for this very purpose in all hospitable houses—old coats and slickers and galoshes that are meant to be borrowed by whoever may be staying in the house. But to be asked to lend clothes that one is wearing is the sort of thing that is not even imaginable except by sisters either in their early teens or who have such meager means that they do have to share some of their clothes. In your very unusual case, since you have been saying "yes," it is not going to be easy to say "no" now. Especially if her things are really shabby. If you can possibly spare a dress to give her it would be better for you as well as for her. In this case you can say that you don't like to lend your clothes.

Colonials Trim Jewels, 39-32, Play Reds Thanksgiving Night

Kaplan, Reiser Leading Scorers At Auditorium

Kingston Piles Up Lead in Two Periods—Jewels Put on Rally in Last Frame

The New York Jewels looked like anything but American Basketball League champions last night until Willie Rubenstein and George Slott got going in the third period of their game with the Kingston Colonials at the municipal auditorium.

Up until the closing stanza of the skirmish the Kingstonians had everything their own way, scoring 28 points to 13 made by Eddie Wilde's club in the first two periods. But then the tide turned in the waning minutes and the visitors rolled up 19 points to come within seven of tying the tally. The Colonials won 39-32.

Kaplan started early, Sammy Kaplan collecting 10 of his 15 points in the first period. He dumped in four nice fields and two foul shots, while Chick Reiser pumped in a pair of ducies and two free ones.

Kaplan opened the second period with a long two pointer, and then contributed three free shots to make up his remaining five. Benny Kramer arched one for two more and Reiser made good on a complimentary foul and a deuce. The Jewels fought short again, collecting only six markers in the second frame on fouls by Rubenstein, Spindell and Slott, the latter being the only New Yorker to dump in a field.

In the last period, Barney Sedran's cagers garnered 11 on fields by Johnson, Fleigel, Joe Murphy and Kramer, and fouls were added by Reiser and Berenson. Pete being unable to find the range from the field after he went in with Johnson near the end of the second can.

Then came the big moment for the Jewels, when Rubenstein and Slott found their bearings as the timer's watch clicked off the last minutes of the fray. Willie ducked through the Kingston defense for spectacular push-ups, and Slott did likewise, the two collaborating together 14 points of the 19 made in this period by the New Yorkers. Rubenstein made 12 for the whole game and Slott 10. Reiser and Kaplan led the Colonials with 15 and 10.

There are no more games on the American schedule now for the Colonials until they play Thanksgiving night, Thursday, November 23, at the auditorium, meeting the Jersey Reds, the team that knocked them out of the running for the president's cup in the playoff at the end of last season.

Caprotti Boxes In Albany Ring

Professional boxing makes a comeback at the Capital arena in Albany tonight and five fighters familiar to Kingston fans are billed on the card. Matt Peretti, Amsterdam featherweight, who boxed in Kingston as an amateur, will meet Jimmy Gilligan of Buffalo in the feature bout of eight rounds.

In other bouts Billy Fint of Rome, another former local amateur favorite, Red Van Alstyne of Ravens and Jess Caprotti of Kingston, also popular in the simon pure ranks of yesteryear, and Lloyd Laskey of the Bronx will fight formidable opponents. The first bout will start at 8:30 o'clock.

Thomas Sticks to 'Fixed' Charges

New York, Nov. 15 (AP)—Harry Thomas, the Eagle Bend, Minn., heavyweight who recently charged that the fights in which he was knocked out by Max Schmeling and Tony Galento had been "fixed," was summoned before the New York State Athletic Commission yesterday. After being sworn in, he was granted a week's postponement in order to obtain counsel.

The commission also called in Arthur Donovan, who refereed the Schmeling-Thomas bout, but postponed questioning him.

After the postponement, Thomas insisted, "I'm standing pat on what I said. I just merely want to take every precaution I can. I prefer to be represented by my attorney."

Caprotti Boxes In Albany Ring

Professional boxing makes a comeback at the Capital arena in Albany tonight and five fighters familiar to Kingston fans are billed on the card. Matt Peretti, Amsterdam featherweight, who boxed in Kingston as an amateur, will meet Jimmy Gilligan of Buffalo in the feature bout of eight rounds.

In other bouts Billy Fint of Rome, another former local amateur favorite, Red Van Alstyne of Ravens and Jess Caprotti of Kingston, also popular in the simon pure ranks of yesteryear, and Lloyd Laskey of the Bronx will fight formidable opponents. The first bout will start at 8:30 o'clock.

Thomas Sticks to 'Fixed' Charges

New York, Nov. 15 (AP)—Harry Thomas, the Eagle Bend, Minn., heavyweight who recently charged that the fights in which he was knocked out by Max Schmeling and Tony Galento had been "fixed," was summoned before the New York State Athletic Commission yesterday. After being sworn in, he was granted a week's postponement in order to obtain counsel.

The commission also called in Arthur Donovan, who refereed the Schmeling-Thomas bout, but postponed questioning him.

After the postponement, Thomas insisted, "I'm standing pat on what I said. I just merely want to take every precaution I can. I prefer to be represented by my attorney."

Gutteridge and Martin May Go Says Ray Blades

St. Louis, Nov. 15 (AP)—Now safely signed up with the St. Louis Cardinals for 1940, Manager Ray Blades said today he would like to bolster his infield but otherwise is content to start off next season with the same players who came through for him last summer.

After accepting a "much fatter salary," the sturdy, baldish leader said it "looks as if our team will be just about the same in makeup as in 1939, except for the infield."

In winning 46 out of their last 65 games last season, the Cardinals nearly edged the Cincinnati Reds out of the National League championship.

"Johnny Mize and Jimmy Brown are infield fixtures," Blades declared.

"We'll have a number of young players in training camp," he added, "and if these youngsters can beat Stu Martin out of second, or Don Gutteridge out of third, or both, our infield will be changed."

Mize, who won the National League batting championship, will be back at first, and Brown, team sparkplug who usually played at short, will be at one of the three other infield berths.

Blades apparently doesn't believe Joe Medwick, the slugging outfield star, will be in any other uniform next season. He expects Medwick, together with Terry Moore and Enos Slaughter, to be in his front line outfield.

Reports that Don Padgett, who batted better than a .400 clip during most of last season, would be shifted back to the outfield if Medwick left were quieted by Blades, who indicated Padgett would be the first string Cardinal catcher next year.

Jimmy Smith at Rec Alleys This Friday and Saturday

The greatest bowler of them all, Jimmy Smith, will appear at the Central Recreation alleys for a two-day period of exhibitions and instructions Friday and Saturday of this week, Messrs. Ferraro and Sangi announced today.

Smith has 18 perfect games to his credit and a career studded with brilliant personal achievements. He shares with Barney Spinella the distinction of being the only man ever to win the A. B. C. all-events championship twice.

Smith, whose real name is Vincenzo Melillo, was the first great exhibition bowler. For years he toured every hamlet and town in the country where bowling alleys were laid. His lifetime average is well over 200 for hundreds of thousands of games.

Now in the twilight of his career, Smith remains a potent kegler. As an instructor he is peerless because his style and delivery have been copied by many of the great bowlers in the nation. He was the first of the great Italian sharpshooters, and is always ranked as the greatest bowler of all time, above the Falcaros, Marineros, Varipapas, Carlsons, Days and others.

In recent years, Smith has toured the eastern part of the country in the role of instructor sponsored by the Brunswick-Balke Company. He appears in daily exhibitions, however, and still is capable of knocking off rousing 700 series.

The famous sharper is due to arrive in Kingston about noon Friday. He will be available for personal and group instructions throughout the afternoon and will roll a five-game exhibition at night. The program will be repeated on Saturday.

Messrs. Sangi and Ferraro invite the bowling public to come out and greet Smith in the true manner of a champion. There will be no admission charge for any of the features.

Yale-Princeton Match Is the Head-Liner on Grid Bill

New York, Nov. 15 (AP)—This week's biggest football game, so far as the east is concerned, isn't the clash between Holy Cross, one of the best eastern teams, and a pretty good Carnegie Tech eleven, but an unbeaten Georgetown vs. New York U.; or the interesting intersectional games such as St. Mary's-Fordham, Nebraska-Pittsburgh, Michigan-Pennsylvania and Tulane-Columbia.

It isn't Cornell-Dartmouth, either, though there's a lot to be said in favor of that contest as a "big" game. There's just no way of getting around the fact that when Yale and Princeton meet it's an important event to practically everyone interested in eastern football.

As a contest, the 63rd meeting between the Bulldogs and the Tigers probably won't amount to a great deal. Yale's team, by all accounts, is one of the worst ever turned out at New Haven. Princeton's Tigers took their drubbing from Cornell early in the season and have been moving along steadily since then, handing Dartmouth its first defeat last week. But Princeton hasn't shown any great offense and Yale is bound to be stubborn this time, so it likely will be a close game.

What makes it important to this section is the tradition of 62 previous games. Their first encounter was in 1873, just four years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first intercollegiate game and two years before the first Yale-Harvard contest. And with two brief interruptions, the Yale-Princeton game has been an annual event.

In many respects the Cornell-Dartmouth game has a similar background, though their "upstart" series didn't begin until 1900. It's a traditional rivalry with Cornell adding lustre to this year's meeting by bringing up a perfect record for the season.

There are other traditional struggles, too, notably Colgate-Syracuse, Lafayette-Washington and Jefferson and Williams-Amherst, but you've still got to admit Yale-Princeton tops them all.

New York Hockey Clubs Are In Slump So Far This Season

(By The Associated Press)

New York's hockey fans after seeing the annual fade-out of the Americans and then turning their attention to the Rangers, are wondering what to make of the new National Hockey League season.

The campaign is almost two weeks old and there's not a victory to the credit of either New York club. The Rangers, who managed to come up with a pair of ties on the road before losing their first home game Sunday night, are tied with Boston for fifth place in the standing. The Americans, who absorbed their third straight beating when they dropped their home opener, 4-2, to Detroit last night, are right on the bottom of the heap.

Boston's world-champion Bruins were as bad off as the Americans until last night, but after being carried into overtime they came up with a 3-1 victory over Chicago's Blackhawks.

Detroit's victory served even more to emphasize the plight of the New York fans, for the Red Wings never were a factor in last season's championship race but now they're tied with Toronto for the league lead.

A New York castoff, Cecil Dillon, who was figured as being a bit too old for the Rangers, hooked up with Rookie Kenny Kilrea to head the Red Wing attack. Kilrea scored the first two goals on Dillon's passes. Keating made it 3-0 before Red Dutton's team began throwing five-man power plays down the ice. The A's cut their deficit to one goal, but a penalty slowed them down and in the last three minutes Syd Howe slipped away for Detroit's clinching goal.

For Chicago, Doug Bentley, a rookie who had a tryout with the Bruins last season, scored in the third minute of play and the lead lasted until the 53rd minute. Eddie Shore, back with Boston ahead of time because of Jack Crawford's injury, hooked up with Flash Hollett for the tying goal. A penalty to Dit Clapper, Boston captain, was the turning point of the overtime battle, for Milt Schmidt broke away from the Blackhawks' five-man attack to score and Hollett repeated the stunt.

Central Business Men Hear Mayor Cite Lack of Space

third snow remover to be used in the central section.

Mayor Heiselein then discussed in brief what action had been taken in the plan to eliminate the grade crossings of the West Shore railroad. He expressed the opinion that the plan which has been submitted will be adopted substantially as submitted to the state public service commission at the public hearing held here recently.

The mayor said that while it was not the best plan that could be obtained it was the best plan that could be had for the amount of money that the state was willing to spend in Kingston. While some will be damaged by the construction of the plan it will be of great value to the majority of the residents of the city.

The mayor pointed out that it called for the removal of the Wallkill Valley tracks from Greenkill avenue, which would be widened and improved. It also called for the construction of a $100,000 railroad station.

Mayor Heiselein then took up the topic of industrial needs in the city, and urged those present to attend the meeting to be held by the Industrial Committee next week.

Father McCaffrey Speaks
In introducing the Rev. John P. McCaffrey of St. Joseph's Church, Attorney Andrew J. Cook said that the Central Business Men's Association had always been active in the matter of grade crossing elimination and also in other subjects of vital interest to the city.

Father McCaffrey discussed at some length on the freedom of thought and action in this country as compared with other countries of the world. It was a question of our liberties in these days of dictatorships.

In this country under the provisions of our constitution we are guaranteed the rights of free speech, free assembly, a free press and the right to worship God as our conscience dictates.

The founding fathers of our country believed that man was entitled to these privileges, and saw that they were inserted in the constitution. Today, however, we are living in an age that is constantly challenging the rights of individuals.

The Communistic and totalitarian systems of government would prevent the exercise of these privileges that we in this country now enjoy, and have enjoyed since the country was founded. There is no freedom of the press, no freedom of opinion in those countries where that system prevails. The right of a person to own private property is handicapped by the state as is his right to worship God as he chooses.

Father McCaffrey warned that

Indictments Name 39 Oil Companies For Fixing Price

Los Angeles, Nov. 15 (AP)—Indictments charging conspiracy to maintain gasoline prices in violation of the Sherman anti-trust laws named 39 oil companies and two petroleum associations today.

A federal grand jury, which in five months heard more than 150 witnesses, accused the concerns of purchases from independent refiners at arbitrary prices calculated to eliminate competition between the two groups.

All of the companies operate in California, but the jury claimed effects of the conspiracy extended into Arizona, Nevada, Oregon and Washington. It listed the firms as controlling 95 per cent of all gasoline sold on the Pacific coast.

Price Understanding
Purchases were made by major companies, it was charged, on the understanding that the independents would, in return, maintain prices for the remainder of their gasoline at about the same level as that of major companies. It also was alleged the independent refiners were allotted fixed quotas which had the effect of limiting the amount of gasoline which each could produce.

As a part of the conspiracy, it was charged, the defendants brought about organization of two associations, the Fair Practices Association and the Independent Refiners Association of California, Inc. The two organizations were charged with furthering the conspiracy.

Major Concerns
Major concerns indicted were Standard Oil Co., of California, Texas Company, Richfield Oil Corp., Shell Oil Company, Inc., Tide Water-Associated Oil Co., of California and General Petroleum Corp., of California.

Others named were Gilmore, Rio Grande, Seaside, Signal, Sunset, Aramco, R. R. Bush, California Oil and Refining, Century, Caminol, Eagle Oil and Refining, East-West Refining, El Camino, El Tejon Oil and Refining, Envoy Petroleum, Fletcher, Hancock, Harbor Refining, Kern, MacMillan Petroleum, Mercury Petroleum, Pacific, Triangle Oil and Refining, Petrol Corp., White Star Oil and Refining, Rothschild, Estado, Exeter, Norwalk and Socal.

Mormon Elders Guests of Club

Monday evening Kingston Lions met for their weekly session at the Governor Clinton Hotel and had two missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints as guests. Elders Claude

Pomeroy and L. Ford Ure were the speakers.

Elder Pomeroy gave an illustrated talk on the development of the west as bearing on the Mormon church. His talk, "Landmarks of Church History," told of the development of the life of Joseph Smith, born in a little Vermont town, and of his travels through New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and westward to Utah where a band of 150 men and three women settled in a valley where the great city of Salt Lake City later grew around the Mormon settlement. The growth of the movement was traced with illustrations of the past and present works of the denomination.
